In response to a client who wanted a “feel-good space,” Ways created a living room (opposite, top) decorated in soothing colors. She added an element of drama to a soaring foyer (opposite, bottom right) through the use of wall colors and a faux treatment in the wainscoting. Using primary hues, art and lighting, Ways added a burst of color to a kitchen and gathering space (opposite, bottom left). A formal dining room (above) boasts an elaborate table base and glamorous chandelier. In another home (top), Ways removed walls and added windows to bathe the interiors in natural light.

Kreative Ways & Solutions, LLC

Interior environments can have a powerful effect on a homeowner’s mental health and sense of well-being. Designer Sherry B. Ways embraces this fact in her business, which focuses on the principles of feng shui and color therapy. Kreative Ways and Solutions, LLC, enables clients to understand obstacles in their lives by studying the spaces they occupy and the colors that surround them. “It is my goal to create customized living and work spaces that overcome decorating challenges and evoke a feeling of well-being,” says Ways. “My results focus on relieving stress in residential and commercial environments.”

A self-described “holistic” designer, Ways helps clients visualize how they want to live and how their interiors can support their personal and professional goals. As a Certified Interior Environment Coach, she uses personal development exercises, color therapy, aromatherapy and home organization to create ideal surroundings for each client based on their individual needs—preferably before the design process even begins.

Ways has personally studied with renowned color specialist and author Leatrice Eiseman, executive director of the Pantone Institute. She is a feng shui adjunct professor at Catonsville Community College and writes about design for the African American lifestyle magazine, How We Live.
